

29 Jul 2014

Green Man Gaming partners with CollectPlus to expand trade-in service

5 August 2013: Green Man Gaming (<http://www.greenmangaming.com>), one of the world's fastest growing online games retailers, has partnered with CollectPlus, the UK's largest store-based parcel service, to make trading in Xbox 360 and PS3 games even easier. Now, for trade-ins in the UK that are £50 or over in value, customers can drop off their package of games at a nearby store.

With over 5,250 convenience stores, newsagents and petrol stations in the CollectPlus network, most of which are open early until late, seven days a week, this service makes it convenient and easy for customers to drop their games off and have them tracked back to GMG.

"CollectPlus offers Green Man Gaming customers a game drop-off facility that is both convenient and flexible," said Green Man Gaming Founder and CEO, Paul Sulyok. "With 20 times more drop-off points in the UK than the nearest High Street specialist, it's never been easier for customers to get their games back to us and take advantage of GMG's great trade-in, digital and console game sale offers."

Neil Ashworth, CEO of CollectPlus, added: "The CollectPlus network makes it so simple for busy individuals to send parcels, whether they are on existing journeys or popping down to their local convenience store. We are the perfect partner for businesses like Green Man Gaming that are committed to offering customers great value and convenience."

For more information on GMG's great trade-in offers visit <http://www.greenmangaming.com/tradein> and for your nearest CollectPlus drop-off store, simply search here: <http://www.collectplus.co.uk/orders/new>.

ENDS

For more information please contact:

Green Man Gaming:

Darren Cairns, Executive Vice President, Marketing. Tel: +44 (0) 20 7135 2274

E: darren.cairns@greenmangaming.com - assets available on request.

CollectPlus:

Tel: +44 (0) 207 025 6500

E: collectplusteam@redconsultancy.com