PayPoint.net to sponsor PRiME at the iGaming super show

London, 14 May 2012: PayPoint.net is to sponsor PRiME (Professional iGaming Management Education), the new one day learning course, at the iGaming Super Show in Dublin this May.

Chris Smart, Head of Gaming for PayPoint.net, will be hosting the Payments, Fraud & Security seminar, when he will be discussing a range of key payment topics that are important to gaming operators, including online payments, fraud management and domestic / international acquiring.

PayPoint.net will also be hosting free payment consultations as part of the learning clinics, when delegates will be able to speak to a payments expert and get advice for their gaming operation.

Chris Smart comments: "Payments, fraud and security continue to be a focal point in online gaming. Our experience and sector understanding has helped many leading operators, including Sportingbet, 32Red and Betsson, understand what happens behind every transaction and where efficiencies can be made. We are delighted to be the payment sponsor for PRiME."

The iGaming Super Show is brought to you by the publishers of iGaming business and iGB Affiliate and is focussed on key developments in online gaming, such as regulation. More than 2,500 delegates are expected at the annual event, which has firmly established itself as the largest learning opportunity in iGaming.

Keep updated with all of the latest news from the event at #IGSS2012.
